High Table "ALL'APERTO" by Pierre CHARPIN

Mosaic work, that has been associated to Roman, Byzantine, Florentine sites for a very long time, is applied to outdoor furniture here. The material contains the object and the subject, carries the internal and the external world. The decoration spreads all over the table, just as a wave.

"DRILLING" Table by Naoto FUKASAWA

Stones of the gallery space were chosen and added to other stones to compose an important block, inside which an industrial swindler drilled the four feet cylinders. A steel frame is put on the feet to support the oak table top. "Drilling" table or the place's memory.

"HEROIC CARBON" Desk by Martin SZEKELY

"Symbol of furniture that became sign and finally furniture. An extreme state of design? Make structures visually simple stand and allow them to envisage the various use of our own lives, such is the ambition of Heroic Carbon. A pencil line is equal to a two dimension plan, two perpendicular lines are equal to two plans joined in a three dimensionnal space and so on to build tables, shelves, seats and all other types of furniture. If technical performance there is, it is contained in the thickness of the pencil line translated into tangible material. Nothing goes beyond the line." - Martin Szekely, september 2010
